Biography

My work is based on the British landscape, its shape and form. I am often drawn to lonely and wild parts at the extremities. I am particularly interested in the effects of the weather and light upon these places. The landscape is always changing according to the weather, the season or our impact upon it. My aim is to capture what the psalmist describes as the glossolalia of creation, hopefully without slavish verisimilitude.

As well as an artist, I am also Head of Art at The Queen's School in Chester. I also run etching workshops several times a year.
